Painter Deladier Almeida is renowned for his gestural, expansive aerial landscapes. In his masterful compositions, everyday moments of rural California are transformed into mesmerizing passages of color and shape. This is a print of his original 48"x84" oil on canvas painting and depicts the view he imagines Tom Joad having in the Grapes of Wrath as he descends into the valley of California. Deladier's work is shown in galleries all over the country and his paintings sell for thousands of dollars. He and his wife, Robbie, are alumni parents of Davis Waldorf School. Their daughter, Clara, graduated from 8th grade last year.
